Description

We are watching the current episode and hearing an 8 year-old call someone Assface several times on 8PM prime TV. This is unacceptable language! When did this ever become appropriate?

Sincerely,

Company Complaining About: Optimum

Description

way, way TOO LOUD. cannot hear dialogue. Grey's Anatomy is the worst. With the outrageous amount of money I spend on cable and cannot enjoy one single program is a crime. There should be a law regarding this issue. It should be regulated.

Description

Shows such as Empire, Scandal, and Greys Anatomy are too explicit in it depiction of same sex couples. These shows and many others like them, have wonderful story lines, yet I believe that it infringes upon the beliefs of so many. Simply because many in this country and in the entertainment industry find this lifestyle to be the "norm", it's NOT. Not to mention the extreme use of foul language in EVERY area of television has truly gotten out of hand! It as though NOTHING is SACRED anymore. It's no wonder our children know nothing about respecting themselves or others for that matter. FCC, please help television shows be creative, educational, fun and less profane and filthy.

How would I suggest you do so? I'm glad you asked. I think there should be two different shows. As as an example, have Empire with the same sex episodes, and an Empire that has it omitted. People can chose which of the two they'd prefer. The filthy shows should also air after 9 pm, and the more appropriate cut would air at 7 pm.

Description

on Thursday 3/19/2015 at approximately 8:15 p.m. EST i witnessed on WABC-NY channel 7 during Grey's Anatomy a scene of 2 females kissing for approximately 60 seconds. This is a violation of the FCC rules for decency and it's broadcast after 10:00 p.m. I believe both the network and the show along with it's creators and all involved should be fined to the full extent of the FCC's jurisdiction. This is a progressive undermining of the FCC's authority by rebelling against this rule.

Description

In the Episode "Crazy Love" There was a domestic violence victim whose penis had been cut off by his wife. After being reattached it was cut off again. The culprit was portrayed as a victim of her emotions rather than the violent felon that she was. Domestic violence can have victims both male and female. To have such a graphic display of genital mutilation on prime time television is highly inappropriate. What would a child think if they saw this? It is time that society view acts of genital mutilation on men as the horrible crime that they are, and not some sort of joke. To further compound the issue, this episode was aired after an event similar to this actually happened in China. The outrageous insensitivity to a real victim of domestic violence and genital mutilation is immoral. There is an actual victim that went through an ordeal like this. There would not be an episode on television that poked fun at a female who was the victim of a horrible genital mutilation at the hands of her spouse, so what makes this acceptable? Any little boys who may have seen this episode risk deep psychological scarring. Any little girls who see this episode may get the impression that this sort of retaliation is acceptable to society. I am shocked and appalled, as a United States Naval Sailor, I have heard and seen many things that would offend the sensibilities of the average person, but this is too far. The portrayal of domestic violence and genital mutilation, especially on prime time television, must stop.
